A New Story of the Little Big Horn Massacre.

A letter written by a sergeant in the Sixth infantry, dated Yellowstone Depot, July 15, has the following interesting points in relation to the Custer massacre:

"The impression prevails that Custer was given away treacherously by a half-breed guide he had with him, by the name of Billy Cross, and every circumstance, so far as ascertained, tends to confirm the impression that this guide had an understanding with the Indians beforehand, and treacherously led Custer's command into a snare, where they were massacred, with the exception of one Crow scout and two guides, named respectively Girard and Jackson. Cross, with the Indian scouts that came from Lincoln with Custer, deserted the command shortly after the fight began, and nothing was heard of them until they came into this camp, about 160 miles—four days' travel—from the scene of conflict. Had they joined Gibbon or Reno, the latter of whom was in close proximity and the former no more than twenty-five or thirty miles away, and informed the one or the other of Custer's situation, the lives of at least some of the brave men who perished might have been saved.

"The guides came in two distinct parties. Cross and one party about two o'clock in the afternoon of the 28th of June, and another party of about one or two more, leading surplus points, in about five hours after. When their different stories were compared they were found to want harmony in several very essential particulars. Most of the Indians' carriage trails were full, and none of them had expended more than two or three rounds. This, in connection with their contradictory stories, created in the minds of many, myself among the number, doubts as to their courage and honesty toward Custer on this occasion, and I for one did it difficult to eradicate this impression from my mind. Most of all of them are mere boys, and one of them gave evidence the other day that he was deficient in courage, and he is doubtless a fair criterion by which to judge the whole. Parties who have arrived from Ferry since with dispatches inform us that the men who were fortunate enough to escape this dreadful carnage, the Crow scout especially, charge these Indians with cowardice, and say they ran away at the beginning of the fight.

"They also say that the night before the fight this Cross was sent out to scout and reconnoiter and was gone ten or eleven hours; that he returned in the morning and informed General Custer that the village was a small one and he would encounter but very little difficulty in obtaining an easy victory. Custer, who is said by his men to be very impulsive, without first satisfying himself as to the truth or falsity of the report, mounted his command and gave the command forward. The command came in sight of the village within an hour and a half and he then gave the order to charge it, which was gallantly done, but no resistance was met until they arrived on the other side of the village location, when they received a terrific volley, which put an end to many a noble fellow's existence, and the troops then found themselves in the centre of a large camp of many villages and completely surrounded by the red devils.

"At this spot the grass and brush were found tied and knotted so as to impede the progress of the horses, and the Indians and some of the villages were screened from view by a sort of wicker breastwork of willow brush, behind which these red sleuthhounds of hell could quickly pick off any of the soldiers without endangering their own precious hides. All retreat being cut off there was nothing for it but to forward. Custer then designated a knoll for his command to rally at, which they did, breaking through the bronze wall of savages like a streak of barbed lightning and gained the knoll, where they made the last stand, all hands fighting desperately, as men only can fight whose lives are at stake and where the fight became a hand to hand conflict.

"The squaws made themselves conspicuous, knocking in the skulls with a heavy club with a stone at the end of it, and mutilating in divers other ways, too sickening to mention, every soldier that fell.

"The breastwork referred to, and the knotted grass especially, presented every indication of having been freshly done, and that the Indians were fully informed and aware of Custer's intentions toward them, and had accordingly made every necessary preparation for giving him a warm reception. Everybody was scalped and otherwise mutilated, excepting General Custer and Corporal Tienman, whose scalp was partly off and who had the sleeve of his blouse with the chevron up and on in a peculiar manner. This enabled a good many men of the Seventh cavalry, who are here dismounted, to detect one of the participants in the fight on the Indians' side in the person of one Rabin in the face, who was in the guard house last winter and chained to a corporal, also a prisoner at the time. Not even a button was removed from Custer's uniform, while his brother and the rest of the officers were terribly mutilated. Reno's command was several miles away from the scene of Custer's fight, but was not aware of his having been engaged until after the battle was all over and General Gibbon had arrived with his command to re-enforce him. To the timely arrival of Gibbon with his 'Dough Boys' is due the salvation of Reno and his command, for they were also surrounded and fighting desperately and with very slight hope of ever coming out alive.

"To the coolness and bravery and foresight of Colonel Benteen, of the Seventh cavalry, at the beginning of Reno's engagement, is due the salvation of Reno and the greater part of his command. He now occupies the very enviable position of idol in the esteem of those who were engaged with him and came out with their lives.

"One of the wounded of Reno's command, who is in the hospital here, says that at one time, during the fight they heard the advance sounded on the trumpet from Indians; they all ran up, thinking it was Custer come to reinforce them, and cheered lustily; when the Indians let forth a derisive yell at them, fired a terrible volley and made a charge which they repulsed, as they did several others that were made in rapid succession. The Indian loss was very heavy, and it is said that after the battle was over, when Gibbon's and Reno's commands were burying the killed, they were found piled up like cordwood, so effective was the fire of the soldiers. Many more of the Indians were tied to their ponies and thus their bodies were carried off, and others were carried away by their friends.

"The corpses of our cavalrymen, with breeches similar to our infantry ones, are represented to be almost useless after the fifth and sixth round has been fired from them, the spring refusing to throw the shell, thus necessitating the use of the ramrod to eject it.

"Great complaint is also made of the cartridges, many of them having hardly powder enough in them to force the ball from the socket of the shell.

"There is quite a number of white men with the Indians, English having been spoken in their ranks plentifully during the engagement. One of the Indians that was shot by Reno's men attracted peculiar attention, and upon going up to him he was found masked, and upon removing the mask the features of a white man were disclosed, with a long, gray, patriarchal beard. This individual was seen several times by Gibbon's command, in charge of small parties of Indians, but they could never get close enough to him to make his acquaintance, so they took him to be an Indian sporting a false whisker for a blind. But when he was pointed out on the field, dead, they recognized him as the same individual. A hater who was dishonorably discharged in 1869, from the Second infantry, is said to be with them, and it is supposed he is the one who blew the call of the trumpet."

MEDICAL.

Simmons' Liver Regulator

For all Diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

After Forty Years' trial it is still regarded the most unqualified testimonials of its virtues from persons of the highest character and responsibility.

It is eminently a Family Medicine, and by being kept ready for immediate resort will save many an hour of suffering and many a dollar in time and money.

DOCTOR'S BILLS.
Your Regulator is one of the best family medicines I ever used. I have not spent one dollar for my family for medicine in five years, only for your Regulator, and must say it does all it says it will. You can also recommend it in Colic for stock, it having cured a fine mule of mine worth five hundred dollars.—(J. A. Nelson, Macon, Ga.)

The Liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and if not regulated in time great suffering, wretchedness and DEATH will ensue.

If you feel Dull, Drowsy, DEBILITATED, have frequent Headache, MOUNTING BILIOUSNESS, poor Appetite and Tongue Coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently.

Hon. Alexander H. Stephens.
"I occasionally use, when my condition requires it, Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator, with good effect."—(Hon. Alex. H. Stephens.)

Governor of Alabama.
"Your Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am persuaded it is a valuable addition to the medical science."—(Gov. J. Gill Shorter, Ala.)

"I have used the Regulator in my family for the past seventeen years. I can safely recommend it to the world as the best medicine I have ever used for that class of diseases it purports to cure."—(H. F. Thigpen.)

Baltimore Episcopal Methodist.
This medicine is acknowledged to have no equal as a Liver Medicine, containing those Southern Roots and Herbs which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail.

Lady's Endorsement.
"I have given your medicine a thorough trial, and in no case it failed to give full satisfaction."—(Ellen Mescham, Chattahoochee, Fla.)

Professional.
"From actual experience in the use of this medicine in my practice I have been, and am, satisfied to use and prescribe it as a purgative medicine."—(Dr. J. W. Mason.)

Florida M. E. Conference.
"I have used Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator in my family for Dyspepsia and Sick Headache, and regard it an invaluable remedy. It has not failed to give relief in any instance."—(Rev. W. F. Easterling.)

President Oglethorpe College.
"Simmons' Liver Regulator is certainly a specific for that class of complaints which it claims to cure."—(Rev. David Willis, my 11)
